

ORGANIZATION WAS COMPLETED

Women's Civic League of Seymour
Elected Officers at Meeting
Monday Afternoon.

CONSTITUTION WAS ADOPTED

Effort Will Be Made to Secure a Large Membership.—The Annual Dues Small.

The organization of the New Civic League has been effected.

A large number of enthusiastic women, members of various churches and organizations of the city, met at the library building Monday afternoon to hear the report of the committee appointed at the meeting held last week.

Mrs. B. F. Schneck presented for consideration the constitution and by-laws which had been prepared. It was voted to consider them by sections. Many of the articles were accepted as readers while others, after discussion, were changed somewhat. It was decided to call the new organization "The Women's Civic League of Seymour" and any woman of good standing in the city may become a member by paying an annual fee of 25 cents. This amount was by many considered too small, but it was the desire of all present, that no woman in the city, shall feel debarred from membership on account of the dues. There will be a receptacle for free will offerings so that any who wish to pay more, can do so in a quiet way. Following the adoption of the constitution as amended, the following officers were elected:

President—Miss Myrtle Huckleberry.

First Vice President—Mrs. C. H. Hopewell.

Second Vice President—Mrs. B. F. Schneck.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. W. F. Pfaffenberger.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. U. F. Lewis.

Treasurer—Mrs. H. R. Booch.

These officers will constitute the executive committee and its first meeting will be held at the library Thursday, April 27th.

The regular meetings of the League will be held the second and fourth Mondays of each month from April to October and on the fourth Monday in the month the remainder of the year, unless called together by the President or Executive Committee. The meeting Monday afternoon was a harmonious one and the attendance was larger than at the first meeting. It is believed that new members will be added at each meeting. A member of the New League says:

"The effect of The Women's Civic League is felt already, the ladies having observed the condition of Second street as they stood on the corner of Walnut street and looked toward the post office Monday afternoon. Such a display of waste paper of all sorts, sizes and colors. Branches of trees also, and orange peelings scattered along the street. The way to have a more beautiful city is for every man woman, boy and girl to take an interest in having everything neat and clean. Why blame the street commissioner or wait for him to do everything. If everyone will work over against his own house and do as the Japanese do, keep the road clean half way across the street from their home, we will all enjoy the improvement."

Hicks For May.

Rev. Irl Hicks is not promising particularly fine weather for May. He says:

A regular storm period, having its beginning in April, will reach its culmination, in eastern parts of the country, the first two or three days in May. A seismic period also reaches into the same days. A wave of higher barometric pressure will follow from west and north, bringing cooler weather.

A reactionary storm period will culminate on and touching the 4th and 5th. Storms of thunder and rain with continuation of cloudy, threatening weather for several days. Severe storms are probable at this and other May periods. High barometer, very cool weather with probable frosts northward, will be the natural order from the 5th to the 8th.

A regular storm period covers the 9th to the 14th. High temperature, falling barometer and electrical storms will appear about the 9th in western extremes, and from Wednesday the 10th to Sunday the 14th, these conditions will progress to the eastward, causing general and violent storms in many localities. From the 10th to the 16th constitutes a period that will very probably cause earthquake shocks. A marked change to higher barometer and cooler, with probable frosts at night northward, should be no surprise from about the 13th to the 16th.

A reactionary storm period will bring a return of warm weather, falling barometer and storms, on and touching the 17th and 18th.

A regular storm period falls from the 20th to the 25th, being central on the 22nd. This period will culminate in very high temperature, drop of the barometer and forceful storms of rain, wind and thunder, on and next to Tuesday the 23rd. Dashes of heavy hail will be most natural at this time, with probability of a tornado coming in scattering localities.

Rain, wind and thunder storms will come in afternoons and evenings for several days or until the barometer rises, attended by westerly winds and much cooler.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 27, 28 and 29. The new moon falls on the 28th, calling for low barometer, change to very warm and resulting in vicious storms of thunder, wind and rain.

INTERESTING RELIC

Of the Days When a Vigilance Committee Operated Here.

A few days ago Joe Andrews, cashier of the First National Bank, in going through some old papers which belonged to his father, came across a poster, an interesting relic of the days in the late sixties when a vigilance committee was in operation here.

It was a warning to thieves and violators of the law and the language of it was plain and forcible enough for even the dullest to understand.

The old notice has been posted in the front window of the Andrews Drug Store for several days and has attracted much attention. It is headed in bold letters "Attention Thieves" and then follows this warning: "The attention of all thieves, robbers, assassins and vagrants, together with their aiders, abettors and sympathizers, is called to the doings of the Seymour Vigilance Committee last night. 'We are determined to follow this up until all the classes above named, whether imported, or to the 'manor born,' are driven forever from our midst."

"Threats have been made of retaliation in case we should resort to capital punishment. In answer, we say: Should one of our Committee be harmed, or a dollar's worth of property of any honest man be destroyed, by persons unknown, we will swing by the neck until they be dead, every thieving character we can lay our hands on, without inquiring whether we have the persons who committed that particular crime or not. This applies not only to Seymour, but along the line of the two roads, and wherever our organization exists. Law and order must prevail."

By Order of the Committee.

USING SEINE.

Under Direction of a Deputy Fish and Game Warden.

A party of local fishermen went to the river near Bell's ford this afternoon to seine. The latter will be done under the direction of a deputy game warden, Ehlers, who arrived this morning. This is in accordance with one of the provisions of the new law. All game fish will be thrown back into the water as soon as caught while the carp, suckers and other fish of the kind will be brought to town as evidence that the men were really in the water. Among those in the party were: Dr. Prall, James DeGolyer, George Frederick, John Fleeharty, Athos Gabard, R. L. Moseley, John Congdon and Marshal Abell. The services of a deputy fish commissioner can be secured to oversee a job of seining at any time a local club makes application to the fish and game commissioner. To comply with the law a club has been organized.

ORATOR FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Rev. Louis King, of Columbus, Will Deliver the Address in Seymour on that Day.

SELECTED BY THE GRAND ARMY

Preparations By Post For District
Meeting to be Held Here Next Fall.

The memorial day address in Seymour this year will be delivered by Rev. Louis King, of Columbus. He was selected by Ellsworth Post, G. A. R. and has accepted the invitation to make the address.

He is a veteran of the 27th Indiana Vol., is an excellent speaker and is well known here. He is the district recruiting officer for the Grand Army.

The Post has appointed an executive committee to have full charge of the arrangements for the day's exercises. J. H. Boake, D. W. Wilson and Theodore Kiden are the members of the committee.

Local Grand Army men are looking forward with pleasure to the district meeting to be held in Seymour next fall. The invitation to meet here was extended at the meeting held at Columbus last fall. Ellsworth Post has begun preparations for the gathering. The executive committee Charles Leiminger, John Fox and Charles Murphy, having the matter in charge, have issued the following statement:

At a meeting of Ellsworth Post G. A. R. Friday night, it was unanimously voted to hold the District Meeting of that organization here this fall some time during the latter part of September or the first of October, the time not yet determined and this will require a great amount of work and considerable expense in which we are confident the good people of Seymour will assist, and in fact the Commercial Association has already said they will support the G. A. R. in this movement. Rev. Louis King, and George Clutch of Columbus, were present at the meeting and pledged their support as well as their Post in making it a successful gathering. Prominent men will be here and address the people, and several regimental reunions will be held, and many from all points in this congressional district will attend, and now let us show what Seymour can do in the way of entertainment. Additional items will be given the press as arrangements progress.

Scared at Auto.

As Richard Madden was returning to his home at Peter's Switch Monday from a business trip to this city, the horse he was driving became frightened at an automobile and started to run. Mr. Madden, seeing the danger, jumped and escaped injury. The buggy was almost torn to pieces in a collision with a telephone pole. He was in town today looking for the owner of the auto.

MORE ENGINES

Promised the B. & O. Southwestern Soon.

The B. & O. S.-W. is promised some new engines, or at least new for this part of the B. & O. system. The B. & O. proper is to receive some new engines of a monster type and those displaced will come to this division. A Baltimore special says:

Ten of the most powerful locomotives ever built by the American Locomotive Company, and, with the exception of the Mallet engines, built by the Santa Fe, the largest in the world, have just been delivered to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. These locomotives are of the Mallet type, the first example of which in this country was built for the Baltimore and Ohio by the American Locomotive Company in 1904.

The new locomotives however, are practically 40 per cent. heavier and more powerful than the original one, which shows the growth and development in power and weight of locomotives used on American railroads during the past seven years. The locomotive alone weighs 461,000 pounds, and with the tender 642,500 pounds. All of this weight is carried on the driving wheels, of which there are 16 arranged in two independent groups of eight each.

Their tractive power is shown by the fact that they are able to haul 100 fifty-ton capacity loaded freight cars on a level track. This would make a train over a mile in length.

As fast as these locomotives displace those of smaller type the latter will be turned over to the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, which will use most of them out of Cincinnati. This motive power was promised to the Southwestern last fall.

Under Six Flags.

A lecture by the missionary evangelist, James M. Taylor, who has recently toured the West India Islands and South America, will be given at the Nazarene church Friday, April 28, at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Taylor will tell of the great campaign during which twelve thousand sought the Lord, also of his trip into the interior of South America. At that time he lived among the natives, slept in a hammock and traveled in a canoe through the wilds.

It is said that his account of the native chiefs weeping and begging for a gospel messenger is intensely interesting and touching. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited.

The third Biennial Music Festival at Louisville, will be held May 4th, 5th and 6th. There will be five grand concerts, three nights and two afternoons. The New York Symphony orchestra, with Walter Damrosch as conductor, will be one of the big attractions of the Festival. The names of the artists who will appear at the different concerts indicate that the music will be of the very highest order. There will be choruses of several hundred voices. Many persons in this section will doubtless attend the Festival. The Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Company will have excursion rates in effect for the benefit of those who desire to attend.

It was stated by parties who saw him, that he was intoxicated when he arrived in Seymour.

GRAND JURY HAS OFFICE RECORDS

Books of Iron Workers Being Examined.

MOVE TO REPLEVIN BLOCKED

Marion County Authorities Successfully Resist Efforts of the Union to Get Back Books Seized in Raid on Iron Workers' Office at Time Secretary McNamara, Alleged Head of Gang of Dynamiters, Was Arrested.

Indianapolis, April 25.—W. J. Ford, assistant prosecuting attorney of Los Angeles; Walter Drew of the erectors' association of New York, and Frank Fox, proprietor of a taxicab company, were arrested here last night charged with kidnapping John J. McNamara, and were released under $5,000 bonds. The proceedings against them were brought about by members of the executive board of the iron workers' union.

Indianapolis, April 25.—Frank Ryan, president of the structural iron workers, who, with all the members of the executive board of the union, was summoned before the grand jury, was ordered to produce the books and other records of the office. He sent nearly a cartload over to the courthouse. Many of the records had been removed to the police station, and these were also sent to the jury room.

The attorney of the iron workers made an effort to replevin these records from the hands of the police, but was met by the court with the statement that there is no law in Indiana by which evidence can be taken away from a grand jury, or even records into which it is looking for the purpose of ferreting out crime. Among the books taken by the police were passbooks for five years of J. J. McNamara, the secretary-treasurer, and it is said that these show sums were paid out mysteriously when taken in connection with the check stubs showing for what and to whom the amounts were paid.

The police would not admit, however, that the check stubs give them any clue to McNamara's connection with the dynamiting, for which he is under arrest and now on his way to California.

First Suspicious Circumstance.

It has developed that J. D. Forrest, general manager of the Citizens' Gas company, was the first man to direct the attention of detectives to the iron workers' organization as being engaged in dynamite outrages throughout the country.

"The first job McNamara's alleged wrecking crew is supposed to have done in Indianapolis was at the plant of the Citizens' Gas company about Sept. 1, 1909," said Forrest. "Two large charges of dynamite were discharged by time fuses at the base of columns supporting the overhead coal bin that supplies the coke ovens. The delay and the incidental expenses connected with the outrage threw on the new gas company an expense of at least $25,000."

The Citizens' Gas company employed a private detective to attempt to discover the persons who perpetrated the outrage. This detective fell in with a gang of structural iron workers who Mr. Forrest says he feels certain, from evidence gathered, did the work. Later Mr. Forrest got reliable information, he says, that made him feel positive that J. J. McNamara was the man who directed the work at the gas company's plant and elsewhere. It would have cost the Citizens' Gas company $25,000 to get the complete information, and Mr. Forrest says for that reason the effort to bring McNamara to justice was dropped temporarily by the company. However, after the Los Angeles Times explosions, Mr. Forrest was asked by the authorities at Los Angeles to give them what information he had.

Will Swell Police Force.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 25.—Orders have been issued to fill all vacancies in the police department at once. No secret was made of the fact that this order is a result of the arrests in the east by Burns's men of the alleged dynamiters and indicates the feeling of apprehension on all sides of the forthcoming labor union struggle when the trial of the accused men is held here.

MOYER SAYS THE CASE IS SIMPLY A FRAMEUP

Compares McNamara's Arrest to His Own Experience.

Denver, April 25.—As a defense fund for Secretary McNamara of the structural iron workers, the Western Federation of Miners, for which Harry Orchard was chief dynamiter, stands ready to levy an assessment of $5 against each of 50,000 members.

This statement was made by Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation. He said: "I consider the entire affair a frame-up similar to the one I myself and my associates experienced some years ago in connection with the death of former Governor Steunenberg of Idaho. The arrest of McNamara shows on its face that it is a frame-up. He was treated exactly as we were. He was not given a single show, either by the governor of Indiana or the court of Marion county. The charge that dynamite was kept by McNamara in the headquarters of his organization is silly. If he was in the blowing-up business he would have had too much sense to keep dynamite around his headquarters. It is very easy to hire Orchard to plant dynamite where the detectives who paid them to plant it can find it."

"The people instrumental in McNamara's arrest will have to produce good evidence to show why he wanted to blow up the Los Angeles Times when he is a member of the structural iron workers."

"Their case might have looked better had they arrested a member of the typographical union. The Western Federation went through just such a siege. It is hard on the individual, but it strengthens the organization and solidifies labor. All unions came to our support and now the Western Federation will reciprocate. We will take official notice of the arrests as soon as it is necessary, and we stand ready to levy and pay an assessment of $5 each on a membership of 50,000 to help defray the expenses of this, the second great fight that has been started by the enemies of organized labor against its principles."

BLEW UP CHURCH

Mexican Rebels Made an Unusual Attack at Parrias.

El Paso, Tex., April 25.—Advices from Torreon state that after one of the bloodiest fights in the history of the present revolution, Parrias has been captured by a force of 300 rebels. At the first sign of trouble many people congregated in the church towers and in the girls' school, where they sought refuge. Disregarding the command to vacate them, both buildings are said to have been blown up with dynamite, killing a number of persons. The federals fought but were outnumbered.

They Haven't Heard of It.

Torreon, Mexico, April 25.—News of the armistice between the government and Francisco I. Madero, jr., has evidently not reached the bands of rebels that are operating in the vicinity of Parrias and south between here and Durango, as advices have been received from a number of points of fresh depredations on their part.

Their First Election.

Monaco, April 25.—The first house of representatives was elected Sunday. Six hundred voters selected twenty-one representatives amid an uproar that would have done credit to an important capital. The progressives swept the board, promising to care for the welfare of visitors and to lower the food rates. They made as many promises as a Tammany politician might, and assured fidelity to the prince.

Caught at the Crossing.

Winamac, Ind., April 25.—When crossing the tracks in an automobile A. W. Hartman, a wealthy hardware dealer, was killed by the fast Chicago-Cincinnati train.

WOMAN FIGURES WITH WRECKERS

"Jane Doe" Wanted By Los Angeles Authorities.

A REQUISITION ON INDIANA

In the Papers Submitted to Governor Marshall by the California Authorities There Is a Requisition For an Unnamed Woman, and Much Speculation Is Being Indulged in as to Her Identity.

Indianapolis, April 25.—In the papers filed with Governor Marshall by the California officers when they applied for requisition papers is found evidence that the proverbial "woman in the case" will appear in the sensational events that are now stirring industrial circles and the country in general resulting from the arrest of J. J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' association. There is also evidence that other arrests than J. J. McNamara's will follow.

The papers ask for the requisition of six persons—J. J. McNamara, O. E. McManigal, John Styles, Jane Doe, John Doe and Richard Roe. McNamara and McManigal are already under arrest, but John Styles and the three persons represented by Richard Roe, John Doe and Jane Doe are still free from arrest.

The papers are a transcript of the findings of the grand jury of Los Angeles county and they accuse the persons signified with the crime of destroying the Times building and the Llewellyn Iron works.

As to the "woman designated as Jane Doe there is much speculation. It is said that between ten and fifteen of Burns's operatives are in Indianapolis and have been since Thursday, and that several persons not yet arrested are under surveillance, and the first step they make to leave the city will result in their arrest and detention.

FOUR SUSPECTED

Cleveland Officers Expect to Make Arrests in Wreckers' Case.

Cleveland, O., April 25.—Following the arrests made by Detective Burns in connection with the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times plant and other buildings, it is expected that four arrests will be made in this city in connection with the dynamiting of the big Brown hoist conveyor of the ore docks of the Corrigan-McKinney company here Nov. 9, 1909. The mystery surrounding the dynamiting of the conveyor at the Randall ore docks of the Erie railroad this winter also may be cleared up. The first explosion caused a loss of $50,000. The last one did $10,000 damage.

The officers of the local union of structural iron men do not fear any investigation, they say. They declare their books are open to inspection. Last night they adopted a vote of confidence in McNamara, and will provide financial assistance for him.

ELUDED PURSUERS

Kaplan and Schmidt Prove Too Alert For the Burns Men.

Chicago, April 25.—Just as detectives were about to swoop down on the last two members of the gang of dynamiters charged with wrecking the plant of the Los Angeles Times, it was found that the men had eluded their pursuers. Matt Schmidt, who until four days ago was under surveillance in this city, cannot be found by the sleuths. Harry Kaplan, the other member of the gang of five, is just as elusive. This was admitted by officials of the Burns agency, who only twenty-four hours before were confident that all that was necessary was to stretch out their nets and the two men would be entangled in their meshes.

MORE DYNAMITE

Is Being Sought by Police in Cincinnati, Home of the McNamaras.

Cincinnati, April 25.—A package of letters found by officers in the employ of W. J. Burns in the home of Mrs. John A. McNamara, sr., of this city, is said to contain valuable evidence. Detective Kelly said that he will take these letters as well as the electrical equipment found in the home of Mrs. McNamara to Los Angeles and that they will be used there against John J. and James McNamara.

Detective Kelly also said that the police will make a thorough search in different parts of Cincinnati for dynamite and nitroglycerine, which are believed to be hidden here.

Mr. Cox Was Out of Order.

Washington, April 25.—The house passed a resolution reported from the appropriations committee making mileage for the session available at once. This amounts to about $50,000. An amendment by Representative Cox of Indiana to reduce from 20 cents a mile an average of 7½ cents was declared out of order by Speaker Clark.

Another Town Goes Wet.

Clinton, Ind., April 25.—The "wets" carried this town in Monday's election by a majority of 901. There were 1,525 votes cast.

MULAY HAFID

Sultan of Morocco, Who Stands to Lose Throne.

Paris, April 25.—The situation in Morocco resulting from the rebellion against Sultan Muly Hafid by tribesmen led by the former sultan, Abdul Aziz, resulted in French intervention, a relief column having entered Fez.

WILL DIE A MARTYR TO UNIONISM, HE SAYS

Jim McNamara Makes Bold Threat Enroute.

Lexington Junction, Mo., April 25.—"You never will get us to Los Angeles alive," was the declaration made aboard the Santa Fe flyer by James W. McNamara, who with his brother, John J. McNamara and Ortie McManigal, is accused of blowing up the Los Angeles Times building, according to officers having the men in charge. On this train are James McNamara and McManigal.

"I, for one, will die a martyr to unionism. The capitalists are oppressing the workingmen and making laws to suit their own ends through bribery. If I had not been arrested the working people soon would have acquired the right to live decently."

"This train will either be wrecked or blown up before we reach Los Angeles. I have eluded my captors enough to get word to my friends to see that we do not get to the coast alive."

When the prisoners arrived here McNamara was morose and downcast, while McManigal was cheerful. McNamara was so surly he even refused to be shaved.

Locked in a special car, hands and feet manacled and closely guarded by four officers, McNamara and McManigal are now being hurried to Los Angeles. The officers refused to permit anyone to talk with the prisoners. McManigal tried to escape just before the train reached Kansas City, by grappling with Detective Reed.

"I would have got all of you if I had laid my hands on that gun," he declared after being subdued.

TO BE PREPARED FOR SECOND WAR

Madero Insists His Men Shall Retain Arms.

THEY MAY BE NEEDED AGAIN

In Case the Diaz Promises Are Not Kept, Revolutionary Leader Thinks It Will Be Well For Present Insurrectos to Have Their Guns Handy, and Retention of Arms Will Be a Condition of Peace.

Paris, April 25.—President Diaz of Mexico has cabled the Paris newspapers that the government of Mexico is confident that internal peace will be restored.

Mexico City, April 25.—Senor De La Barra, minister of foreign affairs, says that the prospects for peace are excellent.

El Paso, April 25.—There has been no agreement as yet, though Francisco Madero, commander-in-chief of the insurrectos, has met the peace commissioners several times. There is a hitch now on how the arrangements will be carried out. Madero wants the federal government to name commissioners who will be able to act in a binding manner for the federal government. He would obviate the necessity of carrying on so much telegraphic correspondence with Mexico City.

One of the demands of Madero is that the provisional government governors now on duty in the states of Chihuahua, Durango, Coahuila and Sonora be allowed to remain in office until an election can be held, the federal governors for these states retiring.

Madero will also insist that his men must not be disarmed. If they disperse they are to go to their homes with their arms. This is to be part of the federal guarantee of good faith. If good faith is not shown by the government, then the war can be resumed.

Madero will insist that the disbandment shall not be in the nature of a surrender. He is willing, it is stated, to have a certain date set for ending the war, after which all men with arms will be considered traitors or bandits. He will insist that ample time be given all the men in arms in all parts of the country.

All who return to their homes and cease operations by the date set are to be exempt from prosecution for any act of war they may have committed against the government during the time they have been in arms, up to and including the date set for final disbandment.

Madero will insist that his men now in office in the four states named and the local officials whom they have placed, be retained, as he claims they have been selected in accordance with the will of the people and that their installation is the first step toward reforms. He will consent to the other governors remaining in office pending the expiration of their present terms, meantime the no-re-election clause to be adopted in all states and by the nation, so that full and free elections will be held as official terms expire.

As to the carrying out of the reforms offered by Diaz, Madero is willing to accept the assurances of the cabinet and the men who are acting in behalf of the cabinet and the president—Braniff, Obregon, Hernandez and his father.

FACTS WORTH KNOWING,

Concerning Nature's Way to Health.

This is an age of progress in the world of medicine as well as in arts and science. Old customs, old habits, old modes of life are giving way to new to keep pace with the march of progress.

Men of science are no longer hesitating to denounce the false theories of the past. Inventor, Edison, the electrical "wizard," among other things, says:

"Medicine is played out. The doctor of the future will give no medicine, but will instruct his patient in the care of the human frame, in diet, and in the cause and prevention of disease."

These are strong words, and in the main an endorsement of osteopathy. Edison's position is one worthy of investigation by all seekers of health.

That the people are doing their own thinking now more than ever before is self evident. In no age has non-medical methods of treatment been so prominent. Even physicians themselves are quietly abandoning the use of drug remedies.

The old method of bleeding and purging, depleting the sick, keeping them in the dark with but little food and less water, filling their already weakened systems with large doses of calomel, antimony and arsenic, have gone forever.

It has been demonstrated that a thing may be both new and true. A description of an automobile would have shocked the wise men of long ago. Why not improve upon old methods of healing as well as upon old ways of locomotion?

Overwhelming proof prevails that osteopathy cures where other methods fail. It has been tested by all classes of people and tried in untold numbers of cases until its place in the realm of scientific therapeutics is abundantly proven to be superior to old methods.

This is a personal message to you, sick friend. Many sick people would get well if they only knew the osteopathic way, which is the surer and better way, yet it is unknown to many and there can be no reason for hesitating to tell others about it. It is not claimed to be a cure-all, yet its scope and range cannot be measured by the failures of other schools for it is restoring stubborn, chronic cases that they have abandoned.

Suppose you look into the merits of osteopathy here in Seymour. A trial will convince that most of the common ills of life are seen with a new understanding, treated accordingly, invariably cured or greatly benefited, evidencing that the osteopaths are finding the keys and opening the seals and coming into possession of the glorious heritage to mankind—health, and through Nature's own methods.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. FORCED TO TENDER A FORMAL APOLOGY

to Miss Beers.

Annapolis, April 25.—Captain J. M. Bowyer, superintendent of the naval academy, has forwarded to Miss Mary H. Beers, daughter of the English scholar and educator, formerly a member of the faculty of Yale University, a complete apology for the action of a member of the discipline department who suggested to a midshipman who had been the escort of Miss Beers to a hop that she was not a suitable person to bring to a social function owing to the position which she held in the family of an officer of the academy.

It was said at the academy that the text of the letter would not be given out here and making it public or not would rest with Prof. Beers and Miss Beers. It is understood however that the incident happened owing to a complete misunderstanding of her position in the family of Lieut. Tarrant. The officer who advised the midshipman understood that she was employed as a nurse, whereas Miss Beers was the companion of Mrs. Tarrant and the governess of her children. The apology was offered as a result of an inquiry raised in congress by Representative Korbly of Indiana touching the incident as narrated in Washington papers.

Orders Interest Paid.

A Chicago special says: Judge C. C. Kohlsaat, in the United States Circuit Court late today ordered that $11,000,000 of the common stock of the Southern Indiana Railway Company be sold after ten days unless defaulted bonds and interest amounting to $4,762,777 be paid. This is one of the lines promoted by John R. Walsh.

The court further ordered that if the sale failed to pay the indebtedness, the Chicago Southern, which indorsed the notes to the Girard Trust Company of New York, should be held jointly liable. The trust company's loan of $4,000,000 was made in 1905. The bonds matured July 1, 1907.

ELBERFELD IS RECKLESS.

Plans to Catch Ball Thrown From Washington Monument.

Kid Elberfeld, the Washington Americans' third sacker, plans to outdo Billy Sullivan and Charley Street, the only two players who have ever been able to catch a ball dropped from the top of the Washington monument. The veteran plans to attempt the feat the latter part of May.

Street and Sullivan, the two well known American league catchers, accomplished the feat with the use of a catcher's glove. Elberfeld plans to go them one better, as he hopes to turn the trick wearing a regular infielder's glove, which is as much protection as paper in comparison with the big mitt worn by the receivers. Here is the way Elberfeld does it out:

"The monument is 550 feet high, and the experts say that the velocity of the ball when it reaches the ground has a value of 600 pounds in weight. Maybe so, but I'll bet that line drives straight from the bat to me at third base come just as hard as any ball tossed from the top of that monument.

"At the base they come quicker, too, not giving a man much time to gauge their line or movement. To catch a ball thrown from the famous monument means nothing more to a good ball player than judging its fall. I think I can do it."

Elberfeld may have the painful experience of losing one or both hands by the attempt, but he wants to try it, and his team mates know him well enough not to offer any advice.

AFTER GRIP

Look Out For Trouble.

The after-effects of the Grip are apt to be serious but a normal healthy condition may be restored in a surprisingly short time by Vinol.

Watertown, Wis.—"After a severe attack of the Grippe my system was in a very weakened, nervous and run-down condition. I began taking Vinol with the very best results and in a short time I began to feel like an entirely different person and I am better and stronger than I have been for years." Adelaide Gamm. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We have never sold in our store such a valuable strength creator and health restorer for the convalescent, the weak and run-down as Vinol, and we ask people in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim for it. Wescott Car Has Young Track Pilot

Harry Knight, who will be at the wheel of a Westcott special racing car entered in the 500 mile International Sweepstakes race over the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Memorial Day, May 30, next. Knight is known as one of the youngest speedway drivers and has been successful, although in the game but a short time. His notable victories of 1910 were the winning of second place in the free-for-all event on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and others. Knight is a hard but careful driver, and his car a very consistent runner. He is expected to be one of the finishers with the money in the 500-mile race.

SEE FOREIGN INVASION

AUTO MAKERS HEAR OF RACING MONSTERS COMING.

Germans Send Over Master Speed Creations for Competition in 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Teuton motor makers are offering America a sensation for the 1911 automobile racing season by sending across the Atlantic a speed monster from the Daimler Mercedes factory, which has time annihilation reduced to a minimum. This great steel steed carries beneath its hood a motor with 583 cubic inches piston displacement and is the largest Mercedes car ever imported into America.

Spencer Wishart, of Port Chester, N. Y., a young racing pilot who has won many big events in this same make of car, has purchased the new creation and his entry in the 500-mile International Sweepstakes race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway to be run on Memorial Day, May 30, was the first announcement of the dimensions of the metal mount which he will drive this year. The cylinders have a 5.1-inch bore and the pistons a 7.1-inch stroke, showing that the German makers still believe in the speed and endurance possibilities of the long-stroke motor.

The car is light in weight, for it weighs but 2,400 pounds, which is almost down to the minimum for the race, the limit being 2,300 pounds, while the piston displacement of the Speedway classic is placed at 600 cubic inches. Wishart will take the big car to the Indianapolis track about the first of May to begin his tuning for the long event. The speed requirement of 75 miles per hour does not worry the young driver, for his car has shown better than 110 miles per hour in the German tests.

The car was ordered by the owner and driver when he was in Germany late last year, and several months have been spent in the making. The careful German mechanics build racing cars more slowly than those of any other nation, but when the cars are completed they are certain to run—and run well.

This is the first foreign car to be entered in the long grind, but the Speedway management has been advised that a half dozen of the best cars manned by foreign drivers will be in line for the start before the close of the entries. Among those who are now planning to come over after the $25,000 purse are Hemery in a Benz, Nazarro and Wagner in Fiats, Lancia and a team mate in Lancia cars, Rigal in a Bayard-Clement; the three-car team of the Lion-Peugeot Cemapny, while the Metallurgique Company of Belgium will probably send over a car for an American driver to take through the event.

Herbert Lytle, the dean of American pilots, is after a Napier, while "Wild Bob" Burman is undecided between a Buick "100" and a Mercedes. If the Cossack of the motor car decides on the Mercedes the Germans will have another monster ready for the event.

BRUCE-BROWN ENTERS RACE.

David Bruce-Brown has formally entered his 90 horsepower Fiat stripped chassis in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Decoration Day. The entry of the winner of the 415-mile International Road race for the Automobile Club of America's Grand Prize gold cup at Savannah on November 12, 1910, assures keen competition for the ten cash prizes—aggregating $25,000—that have been offered for the long event.

The 500-mile race at Indianapolis will be Mr. Bruce-Brown's first appearance in competition on a specially built motordrome course.

On Assault and Battery Charge Filed By Wife.

William H. Stansfield, southeast of Seymour, was arrested this morning and brought to town to answer in Justice Congdon's court to a charge of assault and battery in which his wife, Sarah Stansfield, was the complainant.

Stansfield did not ask for a trial but entered a plea of guilty and paid his fine and costs which amounted to $10.60.

The assault was committed Saturday evening and Mrs. Stansfield charged that he struck and beat her in a rude and angry manner. Their daughter was a witness of the assault. Following it Mrs. Stansfield at once came to town and swore out a warrant for his arrest.

Last summer Stansfield was in trouble and was charged with assault on a young man who had, contrary to his orders, been calling on his daughter. In that difficulty he got the worst of the encounter.

Another patient, from Medora, will be brought to the Schneck Memorial hospital this afternoon.

Pitcher Elmer Steele of the Pittsburghs uses the longest bat on record. It is fully a foot longer than the one with which Honus Wagner does such execution. "I hope," he remarked, "that all the pitchers in the league take me for a monkey this season. I'll show them what's what."

Yale and Harvard to Row June 30.

After wrangling over the date for a month or so Harvard and Yale have finally decided to row their annual varsity eight oared race on the Thames, in Connecticut, June 30. The Yale and Harvard managers have made an innovation this year by adopting an eligibility agreement. This provides that each crew captain shall send to the other a complete list of all oarsmen, who will be allowed to row forty days before the regatta. The eligibility committee will consist of Robert D. Wrenn of Harvard, Otto Bannard of Yale and the referee of the regatta, who is almost certain to be William H. Meikleham of New York city.

Well, when Willie wanted to hand out the sign he would rub one hand across the 'Y.' meaning 'Yes,' and when he wanted to call it off he would rub his hand across the 'N.' meaning 'No.'"

Ty Cobb is tired of hero worship. This may seem unbelievable, but we have Ty Cobb's own statement to back it up. These gentlemen (pointing to his teammates) are just as much entitled to praise as I am. It takes a number of players to make a team. The Detroit team has several great stars, and I would like to see them have their share of praise. This hero worship makes me tired."

Some New Waist and Skirt Styles

Furnished by Pictorial Review
The Pictorial Review Bldg.

222-224-226 West 39th Street, New York City.

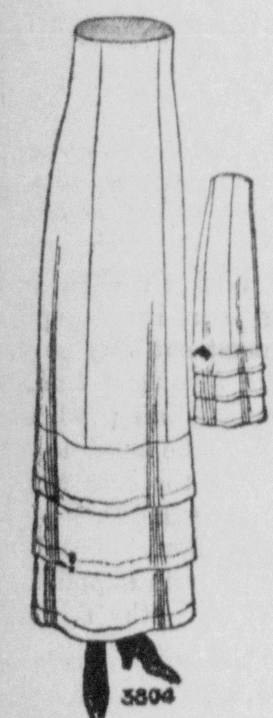

Fabrics having a wide twill or a rough surface are made into tailored skirts of the severe straight type. While there is a certain similarity of contour in these skirts they differ in the treatment of the seams, the number of gores, and the extra width admitted in the form of inverted plaits in the lower part. A large number of them have the raised waistline.

Models having overskirts, such as shown in PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERN No. 3810, are made of voile, crepon, silk poplin, cashmere, satin, and similar fabrics. Satin is so fashionable that it seems almost unnecessary to tell how extensively it is used. Not only gowns and evening wraps are made of it, but smart coat suits and tailored dresses.

Blue voile is a good fabric for the first skirt design PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERN No. 3810. This material is very fashionable just now, especially for dresses that have overskirts or drapery. This model consists of a circular skirt with a circular overskirt which falls in points at the sides. The right front laps a little over the left, and the center front, which is shown perfectly plain on the illustration, can be prettily trimmed with cord loops and buttons. The skirt has the high waistline and is in sweep or regulation length. It closes at the back and comes in sizes 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist measure. Size 26 requires 3 1/2 yards of 54 inch material. The width around the lower edge for sweep length is about 2 1/2 yards.

One of the newest models is shown in PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERN No. 3804. There is a decided chicness to this skirt which would develop well in soft materials such as satin, foulard, voile and very light-weight serge. It is a six-gored model with high waistline and regulation length. The closing of this skirt is to the left of the center-back and the width around the lower edge is about 2 1/2 yards. Sizes are 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist measure; medium size requiring 4 yards of 44 inch material.

When speaking of separate skirts the next question is that of the separate waist. The new tailored waists are simple and cut on straight lines. The satin or taffeta waist for general wear may be tailored in the same style as the linen waist would be. Some very pretty silk tailored waists have checks or stripes in contrast, but the prevailing tone is in harmony with the suit. Besides these, all women desire several tailored waists made of linen, madras and similar wash fabrics. As their smartness depends upon their lines and the carefulness of finish, it is necessary to select an up-to-date design.

PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERN No. 3734 is an excellent waist model. The box-plaits give a smart style to it. If made of white linen, it would be very effective to have spray of hand embroidery between the box-plaits. This is a type of waist that can be made of silk, satin, moire, plaid silk or tub materials, and worn with a tailor suit. The sleeves are in regulation shirt style and the waist has a front box-plait closing. Patterns are in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure, and size 36 requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

Patterns for the above illustrations, including cutting and construction guides, are 15 cents each number.

MOUNTING TROPHIES OF ROOSEVELT'S HUNTING TRIP IN SOUTH AFRICA

Great Skill Being Shown In Preparing Specimens For Exhibition. Old Method of Stuffing Hides Mounted on Wire Frames Discarded.

IN the taxidermy shop of the National museum at Washington they are constructing wild animals as lifelike in appearance as any that ever rambled through the forests and jungles of Africa. The raw material was supplied by Theodore Roosevelt, while the art, skill and beautiful workmanship that converts it into the finished product are furnished by a staff of experts whose work is equaled by few men in this country.

A story went the rounds recently that there was not enough money available to mount all the Roosevelt specimens. As a matter of fact, it is not the intention to mount all of them. There are a good many duplicates, and there would be no object in preparing duplicates for public exhibition. The skins of those animals which are not mounted will be kept, however, and will always be available for examination by persons interested in the study of them.

A Question of Men.

"It is not a question of money," said an official of the Smithsonian institution. "It is a question of men. There is sufficient money to mount the Roosevelt specimens and also other specimens which we have, but there are not very many men who can do the sort of work that we are doing here. A man has to be more than a taxidermist. He must be something of a naturalist himself, something of a sculptor and a good deal of an observer of animals in the life."

The work that is now going on in the taxidermy shop bears out this statement. Only a few men are employed there, and they work quietly and deliberately on their delicate tasks. Scattered around the room are clay models of all sorts of wild animals. There are plaster casts, too, which are executed with a fidelity to life worthy of a Barye. So excellent is the work on these casts that many of them would serve for statues rather than mere bodies to be clothed with skin.

"Our work is just the reverse of a tailor's," remarked the head of the shop. "A tailor has furnished to him the body, and he makes the suit of clothes to fit it. Here we get the suit of clothes, and it is our job to build the body."

Mount Skins on Statues.

Up to about ten years ago the usual method of mounting animals' skins was to construct a more or less rude framework, drape the skin upon it and then stuff it. The result usually was an unnatural pose and a misshapen beast that would not have been recognized by its fellows in the jungle. Taxidermy of this kind is frequently exhibited in the form of stuffed bears and other animals used as advertisements over the doorways of fur stores. But a revolution has come in the mounting of animals for scientific museums. It is now the fashion to make a statue of the animal itself and then to clothe it with the hide, fitting it so closely as to allow muscles to stand in relief and joining the seams with such infinite skill that they are practically invisible.

In doing this sort of work the taxidermists at the Smithsonian institution make use of animal statuary, of photographs, drawings and personal studies of live animals. But most important of all are the measurements that were taken in the field by the naturalists who accompanied the Roosevelt expedition. Every skin that was sent over here had a set of measurements that were taken immediately after the animal was killed. These measurements are more minute and complete than any ever taken by a tailor who makes a suit of clothes. They are invaluable to the taxidermists in preparing the plaster casts over which the skins are stretched.

Hides Are Well Tanned.

When the skins arrived here they were packed in brine. The first thing to be done was to have them tanned so that they could be permanently preserved. This work was done in private tanneries, the result being that the hides have been converted into soft, pliable leather without in any way damaging the hair. In skinning nearly all of the animals very few cuts were made. One incision along the belly was sufficient in most cases, with the exception of short incisions in the legs. The rule was to get the skin off the animal with a minimum of cutting. This makes more work for the taxidermists, but it produces a specimen that is practically unmarred.

When the Smithsonian experts undertake to mount an animal in nearly all cases they first make a miniature model in clay. This is worked out in great detail and decides the pose into which the animal is to be placed. Frequently the workmen make trips out to the Washington zoo in order to study poses. From the miniature model a life size clay model is constructed, and this carries the detail even further, so that the muscular system is faithfully reproduced. As in the case of many of the Roosevelt specimens; there are no living counterparts in this country. The taxidermists in such instances make a study of the nearest relative of the animal that they can find. From the large clay models are made plaster casts. These casts are permanent work and are as carefully finished as the product of a sculptor.

When a plaster cast is ready to receive the skin the latter has to be soaked and made thoroughly pliable. It is then given a coat of arsenical soap on the inside. This is for the purpose of making it proof against moths. A sufficient amount of the poison permeates through to the roots of the hair, so that a moth never takes more than one bite and usually does not get that far. The fitting of the skins is the supreme test of the success or failure of the model making. The hides are not only sewed on, but are pasted, so that they will adhere snugly to the hollows of the cast as well as to the protuberances.

Fitting of Legs a Delicate Task.

Perhaps the most ingenious part of the work is the fitting of the legs. The plaster casts of legs are made separately from the body. In the skins the legs have not been detached. The first operation is to mount the legs of the animal. In doing this the molds are slid into the skins in the same manner that a man puts on gloves. At the upper end of each leg is a device for locking it to the body. This is nothing more nor less than an adaptation of the old fashioned method of fastening skates to the heel of a shoe. Almost any one of the grownup boys will remember how he used to put plates in the heels of his winter shoes in order to receive the little knob which came on the heels of the skate and how, after walking to the skating pond, he would have to sit down and dig the snow out of the holes. When the skin of the animal has been stretched over the plaster body the legs are made fast by inserting the little knobs into the plates containing the holes and then giving them a half turn. So accurately are these joints made that the legs are held as firmly in place as if they were actually a part of the main cast. Only by this method can the cutting of the skins to separate the legs from the body be avoided.

Eyes Bought or Made.

The last operation is the inserting of the eyes. Some of the eyes are purchased in the market by the Smithsonian institution and others are painted by its own experts. The latter are the best, although it is possible to buy a satisfactory grade of artificial eyes from almost any manufacturer. The beauty of the hand painted eye is that it has a more lifelike expression and has the peculiar qualities of always appearing to be directed at the observer. There is a whole drawer full of glass eyes in the taxidermy shop, but in nearly all the important specimens a pair of eyes is specially prepared to fit the subject.

The Smithsonian taxidermists are now working on several important groups. The largest contains five lions and will be an elaborate production. The miniature model represents the bed of a dried up stream. In the center of it is a small water hole, which has been dug by zebras, whose tracks may be seen in the soil.

An Impressive Group.

A family of lions has driven away the zebras and taken possession of the water holes. The head of the family, a large, fine specimen, is standing on a little rise of ground just above the bed of the stream. One of the lionesses is lying down; the other is crouching and lapping up the water. Two cubs are at play, after the fashion of kittens.

The lionesses and cubs are already mounted for this group, and the taxidermists are now completing the plaster cast that will receive the skin of the lion. This skin hangs in a cabinet on one side of the room. It has a heavy bushy mane, yet not so large a mane as is often seen on animals in captivity. As one of the Smithsonian workmen explained, this is usually the case. A wild lion traveling through heavy jungle and undergrowth gets his hair combed so continually that he loses a part of the natural growth. Lions in cages accumulate better heads of hair because there is nothing to wear it off.

The zebra, which is now being mounted, is a magnificent specimen of the animal and will be one of the most prized of the Roosevelt collection. It will be shown with the head extended toward the ground as if grazing. The largest specimen of all is a full grown African buffalo, which is now complete. The buffalo is shown standing with head thrown up as if in the act of defying his foes. Just at present a piece of burlap is wrapped around the lower part of the head. This is to catch his eyes in case they should happen to fall out.

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me."

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETKI, 2963 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PEACH YELLOWS.

Not Much Known About Cause and Treatment of This Orchard Trouble.

Little is known about the cause of the peach tree affection known as the yellows. Unlike other diseases common to fruit trees, it does not seem to be an organism, or, rather, not one that can be discovered with the modern high power microscope. Not being able to locate the origin of the trouble, no effective treatment has as yet been discovered.

It is claimed by those who have done some experimenting with the disease that a fair percentage of the trees will grow out of it if properly treated. The tree must be pruned back quite heavily. The roots should then be mulched with preferably a strawy stable manure. In the early spring the soil should be given a dressing with a complete fertilizer in which nitrogen predominates and should be well cultivated throughout the season. The tree should be sprayed with the lime and with bordeaux mixture to cleanse it from other pests and diseases.

The ravages of this affection have been extensive in the past few years. It claims whole orchards and at times saps the vitality of the orchards of a whole community. Again it will infect orchards of a community with a single or perhaps several exceptions. It is the orchard that is well situated, well pruned, well sprayed, well cultivated and well fertilized that escapes the ravages of this yellow plague. If they are well cared for trees are strong and healthy, and they do not easily fall the prey of the disease.

Once the tree becomes affected the only sure and safe way is to pull the tree and burn it on the spot, being careful that no infected branch comes in contact with a healthy tree. This may seem like a heavy loss, but it will prove the most satisfactory way, as it may be the means of saving the rest of the orchard—American Cultivator.

A WEAK WOMAN AND HER STORY

In Floral, Ark., Lives a Lady Who Feels That Her Strength Was Restored by Cardui.

Floral, Ark.—"I must speak a good word for Cardui," writes Mrs. Viola Baker, of this place.

"About a month ago I was in very bad health. I was so weak and nervous that I was not able to do my housework."

"My husband bought me one bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic. I took it according to directions and now I am in good health."

"I think Cardui is a fine tonic for weak women."

And you are not the only lady who thinks so, Mrs. Baker.

Thousands, like you, have written to tell of the wonderful benefit Cardui has been to them.

Cardui contains no minerals, or other powerful drugs. It contains no glycerin or other mawkish-tasting ingredients.

It is just a pure, natural extract, of natural vegetable herbs, that have been found to regulate the womanly functions and strengthen the female system.

All druggists sell Cardui.

See yours about it.

Bulldog Determination Builds Prosperity

Any town or community that gets a bulldog grip on prosperity is fortunate. But the bulldog grip will not hold if some citizens pull one way and some another. All must pull or push in the same direction.

For instance, if half the people want Main street macadamized and the other half insist that Central avenue should have the macadam and each half holds there isn't going to be any macadamization in that town.

Once there was a creek running living on one side built at a certain point. Folks on the other side wanted the bridge at another point. The two doggedly over the creek seceded side, and now half towns where a whole one.

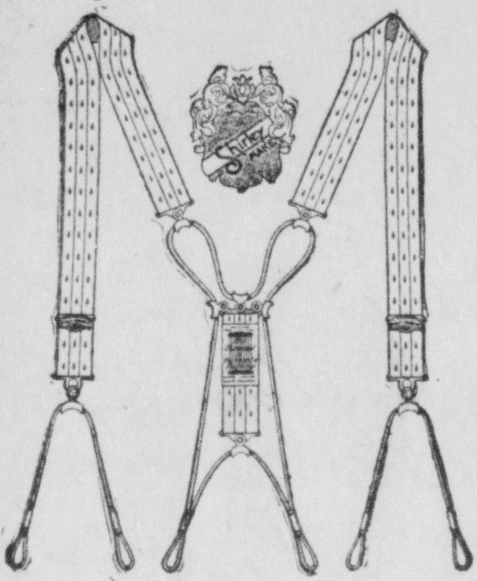

Another way to make a half town out of a whole one is for half the people to buy their goods through the Mail Order Houses in the big cities while the other half buys from the local stores and factories.

If your place has the bulldog grip on prosperity don't pry it loose by pulling against your own local interests.

CHAPTER XVII.

"TAKE him alive!" came the cry. Yes, weakness meant that.

"The roof. There is only the sentinel."

Bridget's words put new courage into me. I stayed another rush and then sprang backward. I was almost at the top of the stairs now.

"Let me pass."

I knew the voice. Sword in hand, O'Ryan pushed his way through the crowd below, jumped across the body of the last man who had fallen and came at me. Had a dash to the roof meant absolute safety at that moment I do not think I should have taken it. My greatest enemy in the world was before me. Revenge and death poised the scales equally. It was his life or mine now. Those below seemed to recognize the supreme moment. They did not follow, but gave the captain free fighting room. I had the advantage in position, but his arm was fresh. Engaging me swiftly, he pressed me sorely. My mad longing for revenge drew an oath from me as he parried my thrusts skillfully. I had never seen him handle his weapon so well before.

With his eyes fixed on mine he watched his opportunity. With a swift stroke he put my sword aside and sprang at me even to the step on which I was standing.

"For heaven's sake wound me, Verrall!" he whispered.

I had done so almost before the words were spoken, how badly I did not know. He fell back into the arms of his comrades so heavily that I thought death had ended our acquaintanceship. My sword slipped from my hand, but I drew my dagger and ran to the roof. Bridget stood in my way a moment, but I pushed her aside and was on the roof before my enemies had time to follow me.

I flung the curled rope over the wall and then jumped forward to meet my last enemy, the sentry. He was unprepared and knew not how desperate a man he had to deal with. He struck one blow at me and then—Ah, it was most awful work to do! The dagger passed in softly underneath his arm, and he pitched from the wall like a log thrown out into space. My foes reached the roof as I grasped the rope and went over.

"A rope—cut it!"

"No! After him!" shouted a dozen voices in answer.

I had slipped down halfway. I suppose, when the words arrested me. A dozen could follow by the rope. I could fight against odds no longer. Only a dagger was in my hand, a useless weapon against odds. The rope above me swayed. My first adversary was already sliding toward me. I was prepared; he would not be—all the difference in a fall. I drew my limbs together and then, with a swift slash of my dagger, cut the rope above my head—and fell.

It was well for me that I landed on soft turf. I was cut and bruised, but escaped a worse fate. The man who followed me struck the ground with a sickening thud. He was not dead, but could not rise.

I reached the river and dropped my coat of mail and dagger into the water. I struck out, sore as I was. Soon I became conscious that I was being followed—at least I thought so. I felt a touch from a human hand. I saw a naked man close upon me. I grasped his throat and wrenched it. Then he sank. He was dead. I reached the shore prostrate and insensible.

A gray dawn was glimmering over the mountains of the east when consciousness returned to me. I remembered things slowly. I sat up, and then I remembered all that had happened last night, for the same current that had brought me to land had later brought my ghastly companion. He lay at my feet at the edge of the water, his face upward, his open, sightless eyes staring at the gray sky.

The thought carried my mind to that other death—that death of creaking winches and toothed machinery—and the possibility that occurred to me made me look at the man more closely. His limbs seemed long and loose. One arm was evidently broken. Could it be a prisoner who had made a friend of the executioner and had died so easily? There was a blue mark round his neck where a rope had been. Had not Costa said that the weight tied to a corpse slipped sometimes? This man, too, had escaped from Yadasara, but by the way only dead men took.

I sprang to my feet. I was a fool to wait here, so close to that terrible fortress. It was light now. Safety for me lay only in the woods. My enemies might know the set of the currents in the river and seek for my body in this very spot. I bathed my arms and legs and then made quickly for the woods behind.

It was well that I was wise in time, for even as I entered the wood I saw a party of horsemen coming from the bridge. Some went along the river bank, while the others spread in twos and threes fanlike over the country. They did not intend me to escape. I plunged into the wood, keeping from trodden paths, and broke off a stout stick to help me to walk and to serve as a weapon in case of need. It would be a poor defense if I were once seen.

I came out from a thick piece of undergrowth on to a broad turf path and then drew quickly back again. Three soldiers had dismounted not two dozen yards away and were lying upon a bank.

From my leafy ambush I saw two other horsemen turn into the path.

"Not found yet?" called out one of the three I had first seen.

"No, and never will be," was the answer, and I recognized Costa. "I'd give a good deal to lay my hands upon him. I took a liking to him, and it's hard to know that one has loved a traitor."

"This traitor's a man at least," said one.

"I shouldn't have taken a liking to him if he hadn't been. I think he is dead."

"We ought to have found his body." "The river has that," was the answer.

"It didn't keep the prisoner who died yesterday," said his companion. "He was lying on the bank, a sorry sight enough."

Presently all five mounted and rode slowly up the path, and I crept through the underwood again. Perhaps I should have been safer had I stopped where I was, but inaction was impossible. Besides, hunger and thirst were prompting me. A few berries might be found and a stream. I must have wandered far out of my way, for I came suddenly upon a small clearing.

A hut built of stout logs was there, and before it was an old woman facing half a dozen horsemen.

"You've searched," she was saying. "There's not a hole where a man could lie concealed. What have I to do with your fighting?"

"You have seen no man pass this way today?"

"No. I was within, and the door was shut."

"Mark you, dame, there is a man wandering in these woods, and he'll want food. Maybe he'll ask you for it. If you give it this hut will be without an owner. Were he your son even you should not escape!"

"Maybe not, but I'd chance that and give him food if I—"

The horseman muttered a threatening oath, turned and left the old woman standing at her hut door. As soon as they were out of sight she shook her fist at them. The action made me wonder if I could trust her. Within the hut doubtless were food and drink, and both I sorely needed; perhaps, too, a corner where I could rest a little.

She stood at the door for a few moments and then came to the side of the hut to pick up a bundle of sticks. It was risky, but I was almost fainting for want of food.

Holding up my hand in warning, I stepped into the clearing. She saw me and let the sticks fall, but she did not utter a sound.

"They are for the king," I whispered. "I am for the princess. Who is your son?"

"The princess."

She beckoned me to follow her, and I entered the hut.

"You shall eat first and, if you will, tell me the tale afterward."

It was frugal fare she set before me, such a pottage that at other times my stomach might have turned against, but now enjoyable as the dainty feast of an epicure, and then I told her a garbled version of my story, true enough in particulars, but wanting in detail.

"You're a brave man," she said. "My son would have acted so, for he is a brave man too. Now let me look at your wounds. Living in the woods, we old women find strange herbs."

She could not have used me more tenderly had I been her son. In the midst of her work she stopped suddenly. She had quick ears.

"They are returning."

"Good mother, give me some weapon and my life shall stand between them and you."

"There is a better way," she answered. "Come with me."

She led me into a small back room and, pushing some faggots back from a corner, opened a trap.

"It's a well," she said, "but it's something more. Catch hold of the rope, hang at arm's length and your feet will feel a ledge. It is the floor of a little hiding place and safe enough. I warrant. Quick; they are at the door!"

She replaced the lid of the trap, and I heard her sweep the faggots over it as I swung myself into the hiding place, a fair sized kind of cellar under the hut. By the noise above I could hear that several men had entered. I could hear the murmur of their voices, but could catch no words. The hut was evidently carefully searched again, the trap was even opened, but the hole was so clearly a well that none suspected a hiding place.

For three days I lay hidden, chiefly in the well, but sometimes climbing into the hut when the woman thought it safe for me to do so. More than once the men paid surprise visits, once nearly catching me, and so well was the wood watched that even at night it was not safe for me to start.

On the fourth night I set out upon my journey. The king's men had withdrawn, convinced that I was not concealed in the wood. The woman told me which path I should take to reach the open country toward my destination, and she provided me with a short dagger, the only weapon she had.

I was in the princess' country, but I shunned habitations and avoided a village as the plague. I went carefully day and night, keeping to the woods as much as possible, choosing to make a roundabout journey rather than go direct with the chance of being seen.

It was on the sixth or perhaps the seventh day, for I took little heed of the passing of time, that I neared my goal. To gain the private door by which I escaped and by which I intended to return I had to cross in front of the camp and climb the opposite hill spur. No sentry disturbed me. Only a light here and there was visible. Something had happened. If a large part of her army had deserted, which would explain why the king's troops had wandered unchallenged over the country, the sooner the princess and I set out to find the exit from Drussenland the better.

I found the secret door and opened it. With my dagger in my hand I groped my way along the dark passages, not certain of my direction. There was not a sound. The palace seemed deserted, and my heart failed me. At last I came to the corridor in which the princess' rooms were. There was no light in it, not a sound. I stood still and listened. Not a sound—yes, a little sound, the slight creak of armor. Friend or foe, he was too near the princess for me to wish to avoid him. So I went forward, taking no further care to step lightly.

"Who goes?"

"A friend."

"That name may stand for a foe now," he answered.

I heard him strike a door with his sword. It was the princess' door, and at his summons two men came out bearing torches.

"Verrall!" one exclaimed. "You come too late, I fear."

"Too late!"

"The princess is gone."

"Gone! Where?"

"Toward Yadasara."

"To her death!" I cried, and I put out my arm to the wall to support myself.

New York's First Stock Exchange

The New York Stock Exchange had its beginning under a buttonwood tree in front of what is now Nos. 68 and 70 Wall street, where a group of brokers met three times a week and speculated on crops and the importations of the West India Company. Later, in 1792, daily meetings were held in the Tontine Coffee House, on the site of which—the northwest corner of Wall and Water Streets—now stands the Tontine Building. It was only natural that stockbrokers should return to the curbstones, especially since for many years a considerable part of London's stock transactions had been, even as today, carried on in the coffee-houses and on the sidewalks of Change Alley, forming at all times an active and excited market.—From the May Strand.

ENGINEER HERE.Trying to Locate a Switch For the Factory.

M. J. Murphy, road master, and E. H. Pfafflin, chief engineer of the Southeastern came to Seymour this morning in accordance with a previous arrangement, to assist in locating a switch to the Seymour Manufacturing Company's plant.

The two men, accompanied by Agent Cherry of the road, Mr. Faulkner of the Manufacturing Company and the committee recently appointed by the Merchants' Association, Harry M. Miller, Victor Fettig, G. H. Anderson, George Huber and N. Kaufman, went over territory adjacent to the factory. The different streets leading to the plant which seemed to afford a possible route for the switch were inspected. Later maps were examined and measurements made. The engineer will consider the situation carefully and will then report what can be done and make his recommendation. It is believed that a satisfactory solution can be found of the vexing question of how to give the factory the much needed switch without using the park.

A Washington special says that in two Indiana cities, at New Castle and Seymour, there are controversies over the selection of sites for the new federal buildings these cities are to have. There does not seem to be much controversy in this city as far as the public is concerned. Inquiries are frequent as to when a site will probably be decided upon and while many people have expressed a preference as to a site, there is no particular controversy.

Seymour will have a forestry or park commission if the plans of the Indiana Forestry Association are carried out. The Association is planning to ask the mayor of each city and town in the state to appoint commissions to aid in forestry work. The commissions will take charge of park work where there is no park board, and look after the cultivation of wood lots and the planting of trees. Later, conventions will be held to discuss questions that will arise and to bring about uniformity of work and purpose.

Burrell Case Cited.

The case of Hugh Burrell is cited by Governor Marshall in defending himself against a charge that he acted unfairly in granting the California requisition for McNamara. In discussing the matter the Governor said: "Suppose the American Central Life building had been blown up and the party or parties charged with the crime were in California and I should issue a requisition for the return of the parties to Indiana. Suppose the Governor of California should refuse to issue the warrant for the arrest. What would the people of Indiana and the California Governor's own state, for that matter, think of him?"

"We had a case like that not long ago. I had to send three requisitions to the Governor of Oklahoma before we could bring back to Indiana Hugh A. Burrell, wanted in this state.

No Time Limit.

The other day in the courthouse a woman lost in the intricacies of the great building approached one of the bright young newspaper men who happened to be on duty at the time and asked, "Will you please tell me where to find de state's eternity, sir?"

"Certainly," replied the newspaper wit. "Turn down yonder and go in where you find the gates ajar."—Baltimore American.

An Undefeated General.

The famous Russian general Suvaroff was a commander destined never to suffer defeat. He gained several victories against the Turks and against the Poles, and in Italy he was opposed by Moreau, and, being completely outnumbered, he effected a brilliant retreat over the mountains of Switzerland, through Germany, into Russia.

Claiming Credit.

"I, sir," remarked the indignant citizen, "am a taxpayer."
"Well," replied the political boss, "you have me to thank. You wouldn't be nearly as much of a taxpayer as you are excepting for my efforts."—Washington Star.
